EKB has been advising clients on environmental law matters for decades. Environmental law issues arise when buying or selling businesses and when conducting commercial land transactions, as well as in relation to corporate governance matters.

Our Environmental Practice Group provides advice and representation in all areas of environmental law and focuses on developing practical and sustainable solutions to challenging environmental problems, both large and small.

Risk management strategies are at the core of our advice to many businesses. In the environmental arena, a specific risk management issue often relates to the remediation of contaminated property. EKB understands the applicable regulatory framework and works closely with our clients and the regulators to minimize the risks associated with their businesses and their transactions.

Our clients have sought our advice on a variety of environmental matters including contaminated sites, cost recovery claims, and environmental indemnities. They have been well served by our knowledgeable and practical advice in this complex area.
